The Akademie der Künste inaugurates the Eberhard Fechner Archive

An event with Gero Ehrhardt, Jeanine Meerapfel, and Martin Wiebel
on 1st December at Pariser Platz

The Akademie der Künste will inaugurate the archive of Eberhard Fechner (1926–1992) on 1st December 2017 at an event in Berlin. The archive of the filmmaker and member of the Akademie was taken over in 2016 and has been made accessible in a very short period.

Eberhard Fechner's films form a panorama of German history of the last century across all social strata. In his documentaries, he created virtual dialogues from endless hours of interviews, such as in Nachrede auf Klara Heydebreck (1969), Comedian Harmonists (1975/76), and in his most important work, Der Prozeß (1975-84), about the proceeding against those responsible for the Majdanek concentration camp which took place in Düsseldorf from 1975 to 1981. Fechner reconstructed the horror in a concentration camp, and recorded the difficulties of the German judiciary and public in the search for justice. Der Prozeß is a powerful television documentary about Nazi crimes and their prosecution, and one of the most important German films about the Holocaust. His approach to document everyday history, Fechner also adopted in his feature films, such as the adaptations of Walter Kempowski's Rostock-based family chronicle Tadellöser & Wolff (1974/75) and Ein Kapitel für sich (1978/79). In 1984, Fechner was one of the founding members of the Film and Media Art Section of the Akademie der Künste and was its deputy director until 1992. In 2011, he was honoured with a star on the Boulevard of the Stars at Potsdamer Platz in Berlin.

The Eberhard Fechner Archive encompasses 40 linear metres of shelf space. It includes scripts, photos, production documents, correspondence - comprising several thousand sheets – with Walter Jens, Walter Kempowski, Hardy Krüger, Egon Monk, and Giorgio Strehler, amongst others, as well as over 1,500 hours of audio recordings of the interviews which Fechner conducted for his award-winning documentaries.

Since the interviews have only to a small part found their way into the films, these recordings have great source value, especially also for research into everyday history. The archive of Eberhard Fechner simultaneously complements many other archives on television history in the Akademie der Künste such as those of Peter Beauvais, Dieter Meichsner, Egon Monk, or Dieter Wedel.
