urbainable – stadthaltig

Positions on the European City for the 21st Century

An exhibition by members of the Architecture Section of the Akademie der Künste

Invitation to preview and press conference:

Thursday, 3 September 2020, 11 am

Exhibition halls open from 10 am

Followed by an exhibition tour with the curators

Akademie der Künste, Hanseatenweg 10, 10557 Berlin

With

Jeanine Meerapfel, President of the Akademie der Künste, and curators Tim Rieniets, Matthias Sauerbruch and Jörn Walter

In its title urbainable – stadthaltig, the exhibition follows the hypothesis that sustainability and the city cannot be seen in isolation from one other. It addresses the role of the European city in the age of global warming, digitalisation, demographic change and the breakdown of traditional social networks, and seeks answers as to whether the success model of the “European city” has been exhausted or can once again prove its adaptability and innovative strength. An installation of photographs by Erik-Jan Ouwerkerk and research results by the Institute for Urban Design and Planning at Leibniz University Hanover provide the thematic introduction. Thirty-three projects from the fields of architecture, engineering, landscape architecture and urban planning by members of the Architecture Section and their guests can be seen in the main section. All projects share the continuity of change and a commitment to the common good.

Accreditation at presse@adk.de

Please let us know by 27 August whether you will cover the exhibition and attend the press preview.

Participation is limited; accreditation in advance is essential. Registration is no longer possible on-site or at short notice. We apologise for any inconvenience.

If you are not able to get accredited for the press preview, it will be possible to conduct interviews with the curators by telephone or online. Enquiries to presse@adk.de
